Item 1.01 Entry Into a Material Definitive Agreement.

ADDvantage Technologies Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: AEY), today, announced that, through a joint venture, the company will support the decommission work on cell tower sites across 13 states on behalf of a major U.S. wireless provider. The joint venture, YKTG Solutions, LLC, is owned 51% by YKTG, LLC and 49% by ADDvantage Technologies Group. The joint venture is governed by an operating agreement and is limited in purpose to completing a deconstruction contract with a major U.S. wireless provider. ADDvantage Technologies Group will finance the project pursuant to the terms of a loan agreement between ADDvantage Technologies Group and YKTG Solutions. The loan will be secured by all of the assets of YKTG Solutions and YKTG, LLC. ADDvantage Technologies Group will earn a fee of 12%, before expenses, for its role in the project. This fee encompasses any interest earned under the loan agreement. ADDvantage Technologies Group expects to generate approximately $1 million in pretax income over the next year.

ADDvantage Technologies Announces Strategic Joint Venture to Provide Deconstruction Work on Cell Towers in 13 States

Expected to generate approx. $1MM in pretax income for ADDvantage over the next year

Additional near-term opportunities expected in 2016 and 2017

BROKEN ARROW, Oklahoma, March 10, 2016 – ADDvantage Technologies Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: AEY), today announced that, through a joint venture, the Company will support the deconstruction work on cell tower sites across 13 states on behalf of a major U.S. wireless provider. This joint venture is expected to generate approximately $1 million in pretax income for ADDvantage Technologies over the next year.

The strategic joint venture, YKTG Solutions, LLC, is with YKTG, LLC (öYKTGö). Under the terms of the joint venture agreement, ADDvantage Technologies will own 49% of YKTG Solutions, LLC, while YKTG will own 51%. ADDvantage Technologies will be responsible for the financing and the accounting for the deconstruction contract. In addition, Nave Communications, a subsidiary of ADDvantage Technologies, will provide warehouse storage space to stage the decommissioned equipment on a short-term basis.

öWe continue to grow our operational capabilities and increase our scale across the U.S. to drive growth in our telecom business,ö commented David Humphrey, President and CEO of ADDvantage Technologies. öWe are proud to announce this strategic joint venture with YKTG as it opens a new opportunity for us in the service business. We also anticipate generating additional revenues by processing decommissioned equipment received from this agreement through our recycling services program, and by selling additional equipment to this major U.S. wireless provider, utilizing our partnership with YKTG.ö

öYKTG is excited to have ADDvantage Technologies as a strategic partner to work on our most recent multi-million dollar award to support the deconstruction program for a major wireless provider,ö commented Roscoe C. Young II, Founder, President and CEO of YKTG. öIn addition, we hope to keep our relationship with ADDvantage in place to cover other near-term opportunities we expect to be awarded from other wireless and cable providers in 2016 and 2017.ö
